nTrying to stay well informed can be a problem. Online searches, reading newspapers and magazines, attending meetings, and much more can keep you from being there in person, or at least in time, for an important event. A more proactive approach is to put some of your most important interests on your schedule. One of the best ways to do this is to make regular use of the readings you're already taking. A reading power textbook can serve as a portable electronic course library that you can carry with you to keep you well informed. The following suggestions for using reading power textbooks will help you take advantage of the opportunities available to you.nA few useful tips:nChoose readings that will help you become a better critical thinker. Do not use readings that will only add to your feelings of anxiety or excitement. Keep your emotions under control, and use this tool responsibly.nThink critically about your readings and read them with an eye for how the information relates to your interests. If there are no specific subjects for a reading, then ask yourself what it might mean for your career. If you are interested in health, look for readings related to health. If you're interested in psychology, look for readings related to the psychological sciences.nKeep up with your readings. Write down the key points you will need to remember.nBefore taking any tests, find out if there are some you can use from reading power to help you.nKeep your reading in one place. One of the biggest problems is that reading is an on-the-spot type of activity. The class reader or the newspaper or magazine that provides a preview will help you remember the information. Take a paper copy of what you read with you to be sure you will be able to recall it.nWith some practice, you can turn a textbook into a portable course library. This means more reading power for you.nA list of sources from which you can choose your reading power textbooks:nAmerican Association for Higher Education: www.ahe.orgnThis is a nonprofit association of colleges and universities in the United States.nKairos: www.kairosinstitute.orgnKairos was founded by the late Richard A.
